What is the most interesting thing about working at Colliers, and about the work you do?

Every surveyor will tell you how varied our work is daily. What Colliers does differently is the way we are taught to think outside the box – to approach situations from a different perspective. The collaboration and sharing of different ideas is most interesting at Colliers.

What are three benefits you've discovered about working at Colliers that you weren't aware of when you started?

- 1) There's a strong sense of cohesion and teamwork, and the open plan floors make it easy to approach anyone in the business.
- 2) There are regular office social events which are a great way to meet other members of the company and learn about the different services we offer.
- 3) There's an online wellbeing hub for employees to ensure they look after their mental and physical health and we have a diversity and inclusion programme led by internal steering groups that are open to anyone to get involved with.

What advice would you give a candidate who's thinking about applying for a job with us?

There's so much that Collier's has to offer and plenty to get involved with as a graduate. Follow what we get up to on LinkedIn, Twitter, Instagram or YouTube and use this to your advantage in interviews.

What does working at Colliers enable you to be?

Colliers enables me to develop the necessary skills and knowledge to be confident and effective at the job at hand, whilst guiding me towards my own career goals.
