What is the most interesting thing about working at Colliers, and about the work you do?

Working with a high calibre of clients and on schemes that impact society and the world we live in.

What are three benefits you've discovered about working at Colliers that you weren't aware of when you started?

1) Colliers fund continued professional development seminars which is an invaluable way to develop your interests and work towards your APC qualification. Internal 'Know Your Company' seminars, which allow teams to speak about the services they offer their clients to the rest of the business, also help to fill the gaps in your knowledge of other service lines within the business.

2) Colliers hosts a number of social events with free food and drinks. These are always well attended – especially by the younger employees!

3) Colliers have recently introduced electric bikes for employees to use to travel between meetings. This saves time when going between the office, meetings and inspections and means you do not have to get on the crowded underground during the day!

What advice would you give a candidate who's thinking about applying for a job with us?

Be yourself, rather than trying to fit the mould, because Colliers values individualism.

What does working at Colliers enable you to be?

A well-rounded surveyor with exposure to all aspects of the profession while still maintaining a good work-life balance.
